Glideslope is a sports marketing and branding firm with headquarters in Manhattan. Working with Conant Architects, the goal was to create a fun, collaborative space where creativity would be sparked and realized.

Conant Architects choose to use Hanging Panels in the Circle pattern. Circle was FilzFelt's first standard pattern offering, and is now one of ten patterns options available in 43 colorways. The panels hang in the intimate open office area to divide up the space at a moment's notice. The space division creates visual and acoustic privacy while allowing light to flow through the perforations, plus injects color into the space. The panels are hung with grommets from a custom wood track system with wood bars attached to the bottom of the panels for added rigidity and stability.
