At the Atlanta headquarters of global flooring manufacturer Interface, Perkins+Will designed a workplace that is influenced by the natural world yet doesn't shy away from pattern and color. At the building's main staircase, Akustika 10 Wall panels rise along the double-height space in a variety of custom sizes. Intentional space is left between panels to emphasize the geometric patterning and disguise some pretty spectacular sound soaking magic. Elsewhere in the building, Akustika 10 Wall is combined with pin-mounted signage to create a branded feature behind the reception desk.
