At the rapidly growing offices of Twilio, a publicly traded cloud communications company, Blitz Architecture + Interiors applied a subtraction concept of removing materials, such as drywall, and replacing them with unconventional materials such as polycarbonate plastic and felt in Twilio's brand colors. The low cost solution of using other materials including 100% wool Hanging Panels to replace typical partitioning has the added benefit of adding acoustic absorption throughout the office while minimizing the need for additional construction. And the Hanging Panels added a design element with the strong circle patterning of Polka 90 Hanging Panels.
